read it in MS Outlook or children and young people with CF: what barriers do they face accessing specialist services in primary care?

The lifetime incidence of chronic lung disease is 50 per cent, with cystic fibrosis (CF) often being the leading fatal condition in children in the UK.

Primary care is the first point of contact for children and young people with CF, yet research shows they encounter several barriers accessing services. This study aims to explore the barriers these children and young people with CF face accessing specialist CF services in primary care. The study uses qualitative methods and adopts a phenomenological framework. Semi-structured interviews were conducted with a purposive sample of 16 children and young people with CF in England and Scotland. Data analysis was carried out using Framework Analysis. The findings highlighted four key themes: (1) child and young person-perceived barriers and facilitators to service engagement and use; (2) child and young person-perceived relationship of services and service providers with these children and young people; (3) child and young person-perceived experience of services and service provision and (4) child and young person-perceived service improvements and service development.

This study highlights the experience of care of children and young people with CF in primary care. This may impact on their families and on access to health care, and services are likely to need to address the care of these children and young people in their homes as well as their wider communities. Q: How to convert a string with spaces to a JSON object in Javascript? I'm developing an EJS template in Node.js and using the following array of JSON objects: var jsonArr = [{ "name
