homoeopathic medicine, also known as homeopathy, is a system of medicine employing extremely diluted substances known as "remedies" (hahnemann's original term) used to treat "diseases". homeopathy does not use any known active ingredients for treatment, but instead heals people by helping them to become more sensitive to the active ingredients or symptoms of the disease, then experiencing improvement. traditional homeopathy is practised by using the remedies in homeopathic "materia medica", an individualised pharmacopoeia. the british pharmacopoeia is a uk statutory document which aims to provide reliable standards of quality for medicines and also to protect the public by specifying the safety and effectiveness of medicines, in order to keep them safe and enable the profession of pharmacists to rely on it to ensure safety and help patients make informed choices about the medicines they need 2 . in the uk, all medicines that are available over the counter and are listed in the bnf are produced and approved by the mhra in accordance with the homoeopathic medicines (manufacture, supply and supply) regulations 2000, and are known as "homoeopathic" 3 . the licensed homeopathic remedies produced in the uk have the same safety and efficacy as they have in europe and the usa 2 . pharmacopoeial standards are publicly available and legally enforceable standards of quality for medicinal products and their constituents. the british pharmacopoeia is an important statutory component in the control of medicines which complements and assists the licensing and inspection processes of the medicines and healthcare products regulatory agency (mhra) of the united kingdom. together with the british national formulary (bnf), the british pharmacopoeia defines the uks pharmaceutical standards.
