Microsoft Edge is a redesigned version of Internet Explorer built for Windows 10. Resembles Chromium, the engineers at Microsoft have built in a number of the same features that you would expect from Google Chrome. Many users find it to be faster than Internet Explorer 11, and other users are enjoying the basic extensions that come bundled with Microsoft Edge. However, the browser doesn't support any of the privacy-enhancing features that Chrome has added, so sign up for a free account, and download the browser early on if you are planning to use Microsoft Edge. The Firefox web browser is a free, open-source web browser developed by the Mozilla Foundation. While it is not as popular as Chrome, Firefox, like most desktop browsers, has been revamped recently. With a number of the modern features of the browser now available, you can get a beyond the basic browsing experience. Additionally, with asynchronous JavaScript and XHR loading, network connections have been made faster, and the lack of extensions is less of an inconvenience. However, while Firefox is a free product, Microsoft Edge, Apple Safari, Opera and Chrome are known for being faster and more stable. So, to choose one of the other browsers, you'll need to check out their features and personal preference. Internet Explorer 9, formerly known as Internet Explorer 8, is an offshoot of the older version of the Internet Explorer browser. With redesigned user interface, IE 9 has seen great adoption among users. Although it has been out of mainstream use for a long time, it is still a popular browser as many companies need to run their business in the cloud, and online banking companies still rely on IE8.
