The following illustration shows the three main objects found in Crystal Reports, the Report Document, the ReportViewer, and the DataSource. The Report Document defines the layout and format of the report. It contains the image and layout properties of the report and the Data Source which in turn creates and presents the data to the report. The ReportViewer looks in the report layout at the location of the Data Source. It is this property which causes the error because it is looking for the Crystal Reports engine.dll file to be located in C:\Program Files\SAP CRM\SAP BusinessObjects Crystal Reports 10.5. The ReportDocument object also has a property for the Data Source and this is where the error is being generated. The ReportDocument object needs to know which Data Source has data to be displayed in the report. The ReportDocument then creates a ReportViewer object. The DataSource loads the data into the ReportDocument and the ReportDocument eventually creates a ReportViewer from this data. The ReportViewer looks at the ReportDocument to find the design of the report. Since the ReportDocument is not associated with the design of the report it is looking for the engine.dll file which is what is causing the error. The ReportViewer is where the ReportDocument is being viewed. From the ReportDocument the report design can be seen at run time. To see a detailed description of the ReportDocument please read the following links:
